*Business Economics Majors should not take Econ 330. Econ 332 should be taken in lieu of Econ 330 for the professional “required core course.” Students who complete Econ 330 before declaring Business Economics as a major cannot then take Econ 332. Instead, they must take either Econ 430 or Econ 442 as a substitute for Econ 332. Econ 330 will count as an elective for the Business Economics “upper division” requirement.

**Business Economics Majors should not take Econ 300. Econ 361 should be taken in lieu of Econ 300 for the professional “required core course.”

NOTES:

1. Students are encouraged to complete Econ 332 and especially Econ 361 as early as possible in their program of study since these two classes, especially Econ 361, are prerequisites courses to most of the upper division Economics elective courses.
2. Students who are interested in graduate study in Economics (or Finance, etc.) should take as many courses in Mathematics as possible including Math 129, 215, 223, & 323. Students who are interested in graduate study in Economics should also choose courses such as Econ 418 & 431 as elective courses for their major.

3. The Department also offers a degree with a major in Economics through the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences. Unlike the Business Economics major which requires Advanced Standing (which requires a minimum GPA, etc.), there are no Advanced Standing requirements for the Economics major. The Economics requirements for the Economics and Business Economics majors are quite similar. The difference lies in some of the general education and other requirements (e.g. students select a minor for the Economics major while the students must complete a set of required courses in various business disciplines for the Business Economics major).
4. Students should consult with departmental advisors for assistance including the selection of elective courses since an optimal choice of electives is contingent on future career plans.
